CITY'S OLDEST NATIVE SON.

Postmaster John W. Breathitt Celebrates His 81st Birthday.

LONG AND USEFUL LIFE.

Still in Hale and Active Health, Performing Daily Duties.

Maj. John W. Breathitt, the Postmaster of this city, celebrated his 81st birthday anniversary Tuesday. He is the oldest living native born citizen of Hopkinsville. He was born in 1825 in the Hopson house still standing on the corner of Main and Tenth streets. Except for a while that he lived on a farm, he has always been a resident of Hopkinsville and has filled many positions of honor and trust.

He fought during the entire war as a captain and later as a major in the Union army. After the war he was Deputy Marshal, then County Court Clerk for about 20 years, and then County Judge for four years. He was appointed postmaster in 1896 and is now serving his third term.

He is healthy, active in body and in the full possession of all his faculties, he still attends to his daily duties at the post-office, honored and respected by the whole population of his native city. If good wishes of his friends will prolong his life, he has still ahead of him many more years of usefulness.

THROUGH TRAIN

Service Inaugurated Between Chicago and Florida.

The Chicago and Florida Limited, which will be operated over the L. & N. through this city, has been inaugurated, and the first train passed through here at 11:52 Monday night, enroute to St. Augustine.

The train leaves Chicago over the C. & E. I., and is delivered to the L. & N. at Evansville by the E. & T. H. road. The first North-bound train left St. Augustine Wednesday, passing through here this morning, and will arrive in Chicago this afternoon. This is merely a resumption of through winter service between Chicago and Florida, which was operated last winter. The train is just about as it was last year, with some improvement in conveniences.

The arrest made by the police for using profane language ought to be an eye-opener for all men who have gotten into the habit of swearing without knowing it.

COMMERCIAL CLUB MOVE

Effort On Foot to Resuscitate The Sleeping Body.

MANY ADVANTAGES.

City On The Eve of Great Boom in Business.

An effort is being made to revive the Commercial Club, which has been inactive for three years. Mr. H. H. Abernathy, who was secretary, has had many inquiries of late, some from large business concerns seeking locations. High rentals and high taxes in the large manufacturing cities of the north and east, and the long hauls and high freight rates incident thereto are causing the manufacturers to seek new sites for their plants as never before in the history of the country. The consuming capacity of the South has grown to such enormous proportions that it is now looked upon as the richest commercial field in the world, and practically all the manufacturers catering to the Southern trade realize the imperative necessity of getting into closer touch with it.

Hopkinsville has perhaps more natural advantages than any other point in the south. The city railroads and Commercial Club advertised its advantages far and wide and the great number of inquiries pouring in from manufacturers is a direct result of this advertising. The good work must be kept up. The Commercial Club intends that it shall be. A special effort is now making to induce the business men not identified with the Club heretofore to come in and help. The grandest measure of success can be achieved only by the united co-operation of all. With this co-operation it is now a certainty that Hopkinsville will be able to show a greater percentage of growth and business activity during the coming year than any other city in the State of like size.

The dues paid by the commercial club are very small while the advantages derived by the individual members are much and lasting. What is needed most at this opportune moment is the enthusiasm that comes from united effort in a meritorious cause. A citizen who does a large business here was asked Wednesday forenoon to join the commercial club. He replied that he could not afford to devote enough time to the work to make his services worth while. The gentleman who had accepted his membership asked him how, with his interest, he could afford to knock the town by the example of not joining. He admitted the justice of the observation, and directed his name to be enrolled, for, said he, "Even if I can't be an active booster I will at least not be a passive knocker."

Hopkinsville has never had so great an opportunity as at this time to secure desirable factories. The commercial club invites the help of every public spirited citizen of the town. When the committee calls on you to become a member you will be well to bear in mind that the present opportunities will not come again, and that unless we pull together now, next year will see another town enjoying the trade we could have secured.

A Mistake.

The statement recently made in the Paducah Register that Miss Brown, of Paducah, had been appointed official stenographer of this District was a mistake as far as Christian county is concerned. Mrs. Ethel Everett, who was appointed by the Circuit Judge at the beginning of this term, will continue to discharge the duties of that responsible position.

J. A. Murray is the new County Clerk of Barren county.

METHODIST REVIVAL.

Interest Increasing and At-tendance Large.

The revival services, which were begun at the Methodist church last Sunday, are increasing in interest. The attendance grows larger each night. Tuesday night the large audience room was about three-fourths full. Rev. P. H. Davis is a most earnest and interesting speaker and holds the closest attention of his audience at all times.

Wednesday night Mr. Davis was "Bearing Witness." He took his text from the first chapter of Hebrews and delivered a most powerful sermon. The Christians were deeply impressed and the earnest words of the speaker called tears from many of his hearers. The stay of Dr. Davis, as we previously stated, is not limited to any particular time, and the indications are that much good will be done here.

BROUGHT $1,200.

R. M. Anderson Paid That Amount for E. M. Moss' Stock.

The bicycle, gun and sportsman's stock of E. Munsey Moss, on East Sixth street, was sold yesterday morning at public auction. It was first offered in classes and then as a whole. Bidding was quite lively from start to finish, especially when the stock was put up as a whole. Mr. R. M. Anderson was the highest bidder and the stock was knocked off to him at $1,200.

NIGHT IN A FOREST

A DEER THE FIRST CREATURE OBSERVER ENCOUNTERS.

Up Mountain Trail in the Darkness—
A Porcupine Crosses the Path—
A Company of Wild Bears Come Upon.

It was growing dusk by the time I reached a camp ground at the bottom of Little Mountain. I took my seat on a twisted root by the side of the water. The sky above the hills to the west was still bright with a reddish tinge and lighted the woods to the eastward; those to the west were of course in shadow, and steadily darkened as the sun sank. For about ten minutes I had been watching the red sky fade, when I was aware of a slight sound behind me. Very carefully I turned my head, but at first could not see a living thing. Then, against the brown skyline, between two groups of evergreens, a small animal, not many inches long, ran right and left, and I knew that it was the white border on the tail of a Virginia deer. The color of the animal so closely resembled that of the grass and weeds, that it was nearly impossible to follow its outline. It was a hind, and her tail was straight and stiff, sticking straight out on each side of her body to catch the faintest sound which might come from my direction. But I made no sound, and she stood there for more than a minute, evidently puzzled and as still as any statue could possibly be held. Then I carefully drew out my pocket knife and very slowly drove it back and forth and thrust it under my coat. Instantly the deer switched her tail, craned her neck and took two strides in my direction. Then she gave an explosive snort, wheeled, and sprang back up the hill, the only part of her body then visible being the white, under side of her tail.

Now it was almost pitch dark, for the moon had not yet risen, but over the mountain on a trail which I knew almost by touch. For some time I could hear nothing but the sound of my own footsteps, and then something hurriedly crossed my path and scampered away among the leaves.

A faint but peculiar odor told me that the creature was a porcupine, and a moment later there came the sound of his claws on the bark of a tree. I left the trail for a minute to hold my coat, and then, having a hunch or a hunch, I crouched, my tail hanging down, and the quills of his back erected and in silhouette against the sky. I felt about until I found a long stick and, raising the end of it, I touched his spiny coat. I was glad my hand was out of the way, when, with a vicious snarl, he struck the stick with his tail, and the next instant there came a patterning on the leaves as a number of loose quills, shaken by the start, fell to the ground at my feet. Then came the sound of his chattering teeth, and feeling sorry for the old "porky," I moved along.

By and by the moon arose, and it was easy to see the way. The trail led through a wide open tract, covered with the dry blossoms of nearly everlasting, which in the moonlight looked like shattered glass.

Now it was almost pitch dark, for the moon had not yet risen, but over the mountain on a trail which I knew almost by touch.

For some time I could hear nothing but the sound of my own footsteps, and then something hurriedly crossed my path and scampered away among the leaves.

A faint but peculiar odor told me that the creature was a porcupine, and a moment later there came the sound of his claws on the bark of a tree. I left the trail for a minute to hold my coat. I was glad my hand was out of the way, when, with a vicious snarl, he struck the stick with his tail, and the next instant there came a patterning on the leaves as a number of loose quills, shattered glass.

As I moved along, and looking cautiously I saw the flower heads waving, as some creature passed among them. By the grunt I knew that it was a wild boar, and presently his back appeared above the tops of the flowers. He was busy grubbing for roots in the grass, and very soon it was evident that he was not alone, for several other backs appeared in different places and the grunting became general. The normal color of wild boars is very dark gray, but in moon lights they appear black, and among the moon flowers these backs were black. There was probably no wind, and what there was was in my favor, so there was little danger of my presence being detected if I made no noise. I took out my field glass, and with it I could see the nearest boar turning over the earth, and pushing the rods aside, and then the next, and the next, and so on. I could find what he was looking for, probably a root of some kind, and then he would stop to munch it, the sound he made being plain to hear. His search for food happened to bring him quite close to where I stood, and I had a good view of him. He was a monster, a root, and once when he stopped to munch a root, I saw his head and felt glad that I stood close to a tree.

It was a few minutes after daybreak that I heard the crack of a rifle, and making my way in the direction of the sound, I found a guide and a dog dressed for hunting. It was a young albinos wild boar, with a few black patches on his skin. He had been shot before his time, because he was not true to color, ERNEST HAROLD BAYNES.

POD PARAGRAPHS.

Pod, Ky.; January 6, 1906.—Esq. Jas. Orten met with a serious accident at his home near Clardy yesterday morning, while lifting the saw at one of his mills. His son, J. W. Orten, was inspecting the engine when a jar from his hammer caused the lever to move just enough to set the machine in motion. The saw caught Mr. Orten and lifted him from his seat and dropped him on the carriage track on the opposite side of the saw. He fell with his ankle on the saw and against the guide. His leg was broken just above the ankle and he was severely cut in several places. Dr. Durham, of that vicinity, and Dr. Croft, were quickly summoned and set the limb and dressed the wounds. He was suffering great pain at a late hour yesterday evening. It is a bad break and it will be several months before he will be able for business again. Two or three years ago Mr. Orten was caught in much the same way, but being a man of powerful physique, he extricated himself and escaped with the loss of a few spleens. Several years before that he had his hand lacerated by coming in contact with a circular saw.

MAN WITH THE HOE.

Say, how do you hoe your row, old chap?
Say, how do you hoe your row?
Do you hoe it fair?
Do you hoe it square?
Do you hoe it true?
Leave what's worth there!
The harvest you'll garner depends on you;
Are you working it on the square?

Are you killing the noxious weeds, old
Are you making it straight and clean?
Are you going straight?
Are you working it square?
Are you scattering all that's mean?
Do you laugh and sing and whistle shrill?
And dance a step or two?
The harvest is up to you!

The harvest is up to you!

You can reap the thing that you ought to reap;

A thing worthless done
With a bit to spare!

For another and wayward soul,
The harvest is up to you; waiting to answer in
Will credit you all the you're due;

So hoe your row with a song and grin.

The harvest is up to you!

WHICH OF THE THREE

By JANE CARR

"BRAVERY," said the clergyman in his pedantic tones, "is a full realization of danger, and yet a willingness to meet the difficulty or death that resistance has seen fit to place in the road."

The soldier laughed out of his cynicism, and, turning to the third traveling companion, he asked pointedly: "Is that your definition of heroism?"

The man who had not spoken or taken part in the conversation looked up with a quick start, and then with a look of surprise and admiration at the bold expression that one sees in the creature wounded to the death, in the eyes of the criminal before the trap is sprung or the enemy at bay.

"No," he said, slowly, "bravery is doing something for somebody else with or without thinking of yourself. I've never heard of a man who doesn't take a hand in the game. Now, suppose—he shifted in his seat and his regard was speculative and keen—"what would you do if Jim Ruggles were to come right into this car and hold the gun to your head—would you—"he turned to the man of cloth with a contemptuous sneer—"would you preach a little sermon, parson, or dig up your loose coat?"

The exponent of holy writ flushed an indignant scarlet, and, ignoring the questioner, addressed the soldier of the jovial, bland countenance.

"Have you ever experienced fear?—I mean the terror of unseen things, by the laity called unexplained phenomena, by the children of faith the manifestation of spiritual power?"

The star on the old soldier's cheek gathered up into the wrinkles of his smile, and with a wink out of the corner of his fearless eye, he replied soberly: "Yes, I've been afraid, but I'm not afraid now." And then, with a hearty laugh, he added with the Gobelin smile: "I'm always here—the sickness at the pit of the stomach, the grip of the heart and the rise of goose-flesh all over the body. If that's being a coward—then I'm one."

"And you experienced that at the approach of mere physical danger?"

"Yes, I have," said the soldier, the dubious inquiry, and the divine turned his glance upon the veteran full of a lofty pity for such human frailty.

"But you never balked or turned heel, did you?"

The soldier smiled into the grinning face opposite. "No," he answered. "I always walk right on into the thoughts of the unknown."

"That's what I call bravery. The meek bairns without imagination never realizes what's coming and sticks by the post, and if he gets killed every one calls him the hero. Now the man who can keep from running when he has the feeling of the ball stinging in his pocket, and who can stand in his seat to save his own life, when he is realizing the giving up in the wick of an eye, and when his healthy blood pounds all through his strong body, when he can face the music of famine or fire or sword, then don't tell me that that man isn't a hero when he gives up the game for the sake of some weak devil whose life he won't worth the blowing out."

"That's my idea," said the soldier, beaming his satisfaction at such plain speech. "It's the brave man who has suffered agonized fear and conquered."

"Don't you think?" said the clergyman, stiffly, "that we might close the window. The sparks from the burning snowdrifts are rather disagreeable."

The three strangers sat for awhile in silence, and the coach, empty but for the casual acquaintance, moved over the hot rails, and the night grew fitfully bright with ominous flashes that flew out from the consumed sheds along the way. The heat became intense.

The clergyman and the soldier sat in unspaking discomfort, but the third traveler moved restlessly. At length he rose and, stretching himself by the window frame as the onrushing train leaped bounding for the bridge. There was the sound of hammering waters and the shrill call of a whistle. There was a sudden bump and wrench, and the three men came to their feet simultaneously. The man who had been leaning forward and the soldier blanched under the ugly red of his scar. The third man rushed to the platform, followed closely by the other two. There they were met by a sheet of flame spreading upward, and the raucous scream of a departing engine.

"The baggage cars have caught fire and have uncoupled us," cried the stranger as he caught at the molten brasses; then in a stifled voice he said: "The air brakes have collapsed. We can do nothing and the chances are that the bridge has gone."

The man who had stood on the first step, ready for a plunge, "Man," cried the others, "you are insane. You would be dashed to death at the speed at which we are going!"

"There is but one chance."

The soldier and the divine clung desparately to the last hope, and their voices joined in a mournful cry of despair at sight of the speaker's face. By a powerful thrust they found themselves back into the coach and heard the slam of the car door. The interior had become a furnace. The insensate mass gathered moments later had slid down the incline into the bog behind. The men's faces were drawn into contortions of horror at the hideous fate ahead of them. Nevertheless, the man of God sank into the nearest seat and covered his eyes. With true martial instinct he had discovered the commander.

The stranger stood with his back to the door, his hands clasped behind his head.

"We will plunge down into the river. It is a drop of only 20 feet. The engine and the baggage cars have passed over it. I think, in flames, but at least saved from the watery grave." His glance rested upon the shivering frame of the seated passenger, and then he turned to the man of cloth and said: "Get out of the window before the car fills, and of swimming to the surface of the river. It is only deep enough to cover the car, but the current is swift and strong."

They took their places at the closed window. "There was a horrible downward rush and a loud roar."

At the window there was a

THERE WAS A STRUGGLE.

struggle. The abysmal brute was uppermost, and its strifa was that of one of the wild things that prowl and snarl and leap in the jungle.

The stranger's grayness gave way to some inner illumination, and he fell out of the ring. "It is the clergyman," the management said with a sigh of relief.

"You go first. Save yourself and learn to teach men how to die." Then he turned to the soldier. "You deserve another death than this. Go next."

"But you, man—how about you?"

"Oh, I'm only Jim Ruggles running away from the law."

"Stage robber! You don't mean—"

"Yes, that's me. I've had many a chance. You can have this one. Don't waste a second; the car will fill with an awful rush. Say, don't forget—"

There was the feel of cold waters, and the lights went out.—See Francoforte Butta.

Heaven help him!

PRESS SEEKS NEW LAWS

Committee at Frankfort in

Interest of Several Measures.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 8.—The members of the Legislative Committee of the Kentucky Press Association will make their presence felt before the present session of the Legislature is ended. Mr. Gullion, who is Chairman of the Association and a member of the House, and Mr. Barrickman, of Jefferson county, are here in the interest of several measures which they will seek to have introduced during the next few days.

One of these provides for a new libel law, and it is probable that there will be two measures on this subject introduced. One of them may be handed in the House tomorrow. Another measure will attach a penalty for failure of county officials to make public the financial condition of county on first of each month, and still another, which is favored by Insurance Commissioner Prevost, provides for the publication in each county of the insurance companies authorized to do business in the State.

Elliott Danforth, State treasurer from 1889 to 1892, former chairman of the Democratic state committee and Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor in 1888, died Monday at his home in New York. Mr. Danforth was born at Middlesburg, N. Y., March 6, 1850.

The three strangers sat for awhile in silence, and the coach, empty but for the casual acquaintance, moved over the hot rails, and the night grew fitfully bright with ominous flashes that flew out from the consumed sheds along the way. The heat became intense.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Little Duchess.

On the occasion of the presentation of "The Little Duchess" at Holland's Opera House tonight, there will be dozens of singers, dancers and comedians. The five essential features of a successful musical comedy are:

Feminine beauty, which was one of the most prominent qualities of the original production of "The Little Duchess," has been made the watchword of the management in the selection of the big chorus for this reproduction, the result being an array of feminine charm never excelled and seldom equalled in musical comedy.

Catch music, the kind that stamps in the memory and tingles pleasantly in the year the next day; the kind of music that everybody appreciates for its charming simplicity, is what Reginald De Koven has given the score, and a number of the latest songs have also been interpolated by way of variety.

Abundant comedy is demanded by the patrons of latest day musical comedy and it is safe to say that no offering of its kind ever had more real laugh-provoking qualities than
"The Little Duchess," with its six strong comedy roles.

Spectacular costumes, for which the Anna Held presentation was famous, will still be an important feature, as all of the original costumes and splendid gowns are utilized as before.

Scenic splendor: the crowning glory of modern stage presentation, obtains in the present offering of
"The Little Duchess," as it did in the New York Casino.

LADIES' ORCHESTRA

Course Attraction No. 6 at the Tabernacle.

The Cleveland Ladies' Orchestra, course attraction No. 6 at the Tabernacle, will be here Thursday night, Jan. 18. Ladies' orchestras have been important numbers, in fact, head-lines in the various lecture and entertainment courses of the country for several seasons past. There have been very few successful ones from every point of view. The question naturally comes, what makes an organization of this kind a success? These points. A thoroughly capable conductor and a well balanced company of musicians. A carefully arranged instrumentation, and constant rehearsals for lights and shading, to give perfect and artistic musical effects; Soloists of unusual merit, of the kind that can hold their places among the more featured artists of other concert companies. All these points are needed, and, more—the company must be composed of ladies. In presenting an orchestra this year, a strong number of soloists under the direction of Alfred Metzidor, the great Cleveland leader and violin soloist, was selected. It is a company of artistic merit, in which members play no part—not how many people but what kind of artists, has been the idea in arranging this combination.

There is a decided improvement in the street electric lights, for which everybody is giving thanks.

Local Leaflets.

The ice on the ponds was thick enough for the boys to skate Tuesday and Wednesday.

Work is in progress day and night putting in the counters and furniture of the new bank.

The drummers are again on the road, and business is picking up at Hotel Latham.

Electric cars are again being talked about more than anything else, and the people are still hoping we will have them.

The health of the people of the city and county is unusually good, and deaths are so infrequent that the undertakers are "looking blue."

The Christmas rush in matrimonial matters has about subsided, but there are a "few more" left and we predict this year's record will be a "stunner."

The new Chief of the Fire Department is a past Noble Grand of the Order of Odd Fellows and is a member of the popular contracting firm of Hester & Thompson.

The Republican "organ" has again made its appearance. Some one remarked the other day that the "organ" has so many "stops" to it that no one can tell how long it will play.

Sixteen passenger trains arrive here every twenty-four hours, which is pretty good for a town of this size.

The new officers of the Knights of Pythias lodge will be installed at the regular meeting to-night. Mr. J. Will Stowe, the popular young bookkeeper at Forbes', is the incoming Chancellor Commander. He succeeds Capt. Ellis Roper, chief of police.

A bill has been introduced in the Legislature to punish house-breaking at night, making it a capital offense. If a fellow steals chickens of the value of $2 he is sent to the penitentiary for one or five years, and, of course, fed and clothed for his term of imprisonment. Some people think that the whipping-post law ought to be re-enacted, as 39 stripes on the bare back will do more good than wearing stripes all over him in the "pen."

Notice.

The firm of Clark & Johnson has this day been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. W. W. Johnson retiring.

The new firm will assume all liabilities and collect all accounts, and the business in future will be conducted under the firm name of C. R. Clark & Co. We wish to take this opportunity of thanking all of our friends and customers for the liberal patronage we have enjoyed in the past, and assure you that the same courteous attention will be shown and all orders filled promptly.

Mr. Cliff A. Clark will give the business his attention and will be assisted by competent salesmen. Mr. Johnson will devote his entire time and attention to the office of Jaller of Christian county.

Respectfully,
C. R. CLARK,
W. W. JOHNSON.
